Throughout history, scholars have recognised that memory plays a central role in cognitive development. It is therefore essential to understand which techniques can help us memorize more efficiently. One of the most effective ways (1) _____. Below are two simple techniques to help you remember everything, even a shopping list of eight items. The first method involves creating a vivid and unusual story. For example, picture a giant loaf of bread with coffee suddenly spraying out like a fountain. The coffee turns into white yogurt, (2) _____. Olives run across the bridge while large eggs chase them. The olives hide behind a carton of orange juice. When you try to eat one, it becomes a terrible-tasting onion. (3) _____.

The second technique is called the "memory palace". Visualize your home and mentally walk through each room. Place the items from your list in specific locations, such as bread on the doormat or coffee in front of the TV. (4) _____, you make the information easier to recall. Not only is this strategy useful for shopping lists (5) _____.

It's the end of the school year and the exam period is approaching. Undoubtedly, exams (11) pressure on both students and parents alike. (12) parents would like to see their children succeeding academically, as they believe a good education gives them an added advantage in life.

They want to see their children settled in a rewarding job and be financially well-off. But is that what their children have planned for themselves? Apparently it is not. Most students either can't think that far ahead or have no intention of doing so. They would rather aim low so as not to be disappointed if they get low marks.

However, child psychologists, who have been consulted on the matter, stress that students should aim high, but at the same time have a variety of other options. (13), students will not have to worry about grades and in the long term they will have better chances of succeeding. On the whole, there are many practical and invaluable things (14) parents can do for their children.

Apart from being people their children can turn to, parents can plan a reasonable schedule that both they and their children agree on. According to psychologists' (15), this schedule should include no more than eight hours of studying, three proper meals a day and some exercise. Above all, prior to each exam, parents need to reassure their children that everything will be fine whatever the result.

We originally founded our organisation to give English teenagers the opportunity to go and stay with French families to learn the language. Then we realised that it made sense to run an exchange programme, and (21) to include several different countries. Having the chance to practise a language in the country in which it is spoken is, (22), very effective and really helps the learning process.
Going on an exchange allows learners to mix with inhabitants and in this way they can acquire a greater and deeper knowledge of the people (23) language they are studying. If you think you'd be interested in participating in our exchange programme, why not contact us to discuss your particular requirements? From the information you give us, we can make (24) recommendations and suggest several different possibilities. We want to avoid you going somewhere (25) and not making the most of the experience. Our aim is that all our students have a truly memorable time.

A new chatbot has passed one million users in less than a week, the project behind it says. ChatGPT was publicly released on Wednesday by OpenAI, an artificial intelligence research firm whose founders included Elon Musk. ChatGPT is the latest in a series of Als which the firm refers to as GPTS, an acronym which (26) for Generative Pre-Trained Transformer.

To develop the system, an early version was fine-tuned through conversations with human trainers. The system also learned from access to Twitter data according to a tweet from Elon Musk, (27) is no longer part of OpenAl's board. The Twitter boss wrote that he had paused access "for now". The results have impressed (28) people who have tried out the chatbot. OpenAl chief executive Sam Altman revealed the level of interest in the artificial conversationalist in a tweet. The project says the chat format allows the Al to answer "follow-up questions, admit its mistakes, challenge incorrect premises and reject inappropriate requests".

A journalist for technology news site Mashable who tried out ChatGPT reported it is hard to provoke the model into saying offensive things. (29), OpenAl warns that "ChatGPT sometimes writes plausible-sounding but incorrect or nonsensical answers". Training the model to be more cautious, says the firm, causes it to decline to answer questions that it can answer correctly. Briefly questioned by the BBC for this article, ChatGPT revealed itself to be a cautious interviewee (30) of expressing itself clearly and accurately in English.

The word "grandparents' is descriptive of the unique dual parenting role that this generation assumes. It emphasizes the vital part they play in family life. With a (36) of old world experience behind them, and with the unique ability to metamorphose from advisers or mediators into listeners or friends, they can offer support and stability in an ever-changing world. The underlying sense of responsibility (37) goes with this is tremendous.

Grandparents perform a balancing act between the needs of their adult children and those of their grandchildren. This role is varied. It is imperial at times, muted at (38). It goes underground whenever required, but it is solid and absolutely dependable. Grandparents often (39) the gap between parents and children. Rebellious, independent children who are trying to find their feet are almost always at loggerheads with their parents. The role of grandparents can be very important provided that they act as impartial judges and are able to convey this feeling to both parties. One important thing, which seems to be missing in the lives of children today, is a sense of family, values, beliefs and principles. This is where the grandparents step in. (40), instilling beliefs and values is not as easy as it was fifty or sixty years ago.

Keeping fit and healthy may seem difficult, but there are a few easy-to-follow guidelines. Firstly, a balanced diet is absolutely essential. This means selecting food that is (41) in salt and sugar. Experts recommend (42) the amount of fat in our diet, as too much can lead to heart problems. They also suggest increasing the amount of high fibre food we eat. This comes in the form of fresh fruit, vegetables, whole meal bread and pasta. As well as being packed (43) vitamins and minerals, they are delicious too.
Secondly, it's important to fit exercise into your daily (44). This can be done by simply walking as much as possible and climbing stairs instead of taking the lift. Exercise is necessary to maintain a healthy body, as well as increasing energy levels and making you feel generally fitter and happier. Finally, staying relaxed is important for good health.

Too much stress can lead to a variety of illnesses, from headaches to high blood pressure. Whenever possible, do things you enjoy and treat yourself occasionally. So the message is simple - enjoy yourself but learn to respect your body too. It's all a (45) of getting the balance right.

Despite the wealth of information campaigns telling people about global warming and its causes, (46) people have yet to realize how severe the problem is. Coming climate changes could alter as much as one third of plant and animal habitats by the end of the 22nd century. These changes could in turn cause widespread extinctions among plant and animal species around the globe.

Coastal and island habitats are perhaps in the greatest danger (47) they face the combined threats of warming oceans and rising sea levels. As habitats change, many animals will come under intense pressure to find more suitable homes for themselves. Mass (48) of at least some animals are certainly to be expected, but the fact remains that many animals will simply not be able to move fast enough.

Such dire predictions may sound alarmist, but they are based on the rather moderate estimate that the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere will double by 2100. Many scientists believe, however, (49) this figure is actually very conservative, and they claim that a tripling is far more realistic. If they are (50), the effects on nature will be even If you think of the jobs robots could never do, you would probably put doctors and teachers at the top of the list. It's easy to imagine robot cleaners and factory workers, but some jobs need human connection and creativity. But are we underestimating what robots can do? In some cases, they already perform better than doctors at diagnosing illness. Also, some patients might feel more comfortable sharing personal information with a machine than a person.

Cultural diversity enriches societies by bringing together traditions, languages, and perspectives from different backgrounds. It fosters creativity and innovation by allowing people to learn from one another. For instance, the cuisine of a multicultural city is often more diverse than that of a homogenous community. Additionally, cultural diversity promotes understanding and tolerance among individuals. Embracing diversity is essential for building inclusive and harmonious societies.

Today's city planners face a big challenge: fighting the sprawl that has disconnected communities and forced people into cars to navigate from home to work to shopping. In the U.S., sprawl happened for reasons that made it seem like a good idea at the time. Millions of soldiers had come home from World War II to overcrowded, run-down cities; their new families needed a place to live. Driving to the suburbs felt liberating and modern. In China, after the cultural revolution, sprawl happened for good reasons too. Just as with American suburbs, which helped realize millions of American dreams, the results are great, to a degree. The average Chinese family now has 360 square feet of space per person, four times the average of two decades ago. But the spaces between the buildings are uninviting, and people don't use them.

Electronic devices present a big problem for conservation because technology changes so quickly. For example, consumers typically replace their cell phones every 18 months. Computers, televisions, and MP3 players are other products contributing to "e-waste". The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) estimates that Americans generated more than three million tons of e-waste in 2007. Electronic products contain minerals as well as petroleum-based plastics. Many of them also contain hazardous materials that can leach out of landfills into the soil and water supply.

Brazil is home to the largest population in Latin America, of more than 215 million people. Most of them live in the south-central area, which includes the industrial cities of Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, and Belo Horizonte. The pace of urbanisation has been rapid, with 75% of the population living in urban areas by 1991. While this growth has contributed to economic development, it has also led to serious social, environmental, and political challenges in major cities. Nevertheless, Brazil remains famous for its breathtaking natural beauty.

Humans rely on the ocean for many things, including food, jobs, recreation and stabilization of Earth's climate. But although ocean resources may seem infinite, human impacts like pollution, overfishing and climate change are creating what United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres has called an "ocean emergency". Solar power is all about harnessing the energy of the sun by using solar panels to convert sunlight into usable electricity. This highly efficient form of energy produces zero emissions, so it can significantly reduce our carbon footprint. Moreover, solar panels are perfect for installation on a small scale, such as in private homes, since they require very little maintenance and have a long lifespan. However, the ability to generate solar power depends on the time of day and weather conditions. This means that solar panels are often less useful if they are installed in places where sunny weather is not typical.

Over the past two centuries, different generations were born and given different names. Each generation comes with its characteristics, which are largely influenced by the historical, economic, and social conditions of the country they live in. However, in many countries, the following three generations have common characteristics.

Generation X refers to the generation born between 1965 and 1980. When Gen Xers grew up, they experienced many social changes and developments in history. As a result, they are always ready for changes and prepared to work through changes. Gen Xers are also known as critical thinkers because they achieved higher levels of education than previous generations.

Generation Y, also known as Millennials, refers to those born between the early 1980s and late 1990s. They are curious and ready to accept changes. If there is a faster, better way of doing something, Millennials want to try it out. They also value teamwork. When working in a team, Millennials welcome different points of view and ideas from others.

Generation Z includes people born between the late 1990s and early 2010s, a time of great technological developments and changes. That is why Gen Zers are also called digital natives. They grew up online and never knew the world before digital and social media. They are very creative and able to experiment with platforms to suit their needs. Many Gen Zers are also interested in starting their own businesses and companies. They saw so many people lose their jobs, so they think it is safer to be your own boss than relying on someone else to hire you.

Soon a new generation, labelled Gen Alpha, will be on the scene. Let's wait and see if we will notice the generation gap.

(D) Gen Zers believe it's safer to be their own boss rather than depending on others for employment.

The suburbs are now spreading onto the smaller provinces, making land that was in the country become residential areas for city people, thus causing urbanisation. Although urbanisation is not new, many cities in the world have never seen such a sharp rise in city dwellers. But have you thought about what can cause such development? And how does it affect society?

The expansion of the suburbs can be put down to car ownership and better living conditions that some companies offer. First, more people have cars. So this has encouraged people to move to the suburbs and not have to worry about the long commute to work. Second, living conditions on the outskirts are far greater than in the city centre. For example, homes in cities are often too small and the roads are too narrow for people to drive through. However, in the suburbs, not only can people have a bigger living space, but suburban apartment owners can also find their way into beautiful parks and pools.

As for what urbanisation can have on society, there are two main worries: environmental pollution and land waste. One big consequence is that people driving from home in the suburbs to work in the city can cause air pollution. For example, in contrast to 30 years ago, when cars weren't popularised, air quality in Hà Nội was one of the healthiest in Asia; now, it is placed among the worst in the world. Another effect is wasted land. Instead of making space for agriculture or animal preservation, companies are chopping down trees for apartment buildings near the countryside.

Sad as it sounds, urbanisation is hardly avoidable. So we must consider what house we are buying and its impact on the environment.

Câu 3. [P20 STUDY] (Đúng/Không đúng)

Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

(A) Urbanisation has caused a significant decrease in the number of city dwellers in many cities.

(B) The expansion of the suburbs can be attributed to car ownership and better living conditions.

(C) Environmental pollution and land waste are not the two main worries caused by urbanisation.

(D) Companies are planting trees for agricultural preservation instead of cutting them down.

Câu 4. [P20 STUDY] (Đúng/Không đúng)
Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage?

(A) More car ownership has encouraged people to move to the suburbs and avoid long commutes.

(B) Homes in cities are often large, and the roads are wide enough for people to drive through.

(C) Air quality in Hà Nội was once one of the healthiest in Asia, but now it's among the worst.

(D) Urbanisation is inevitable, so we must consider the environmental impact of the houses we buy.

If you walk into the streets and see someone throwing a plastic bottle on the ground, you'll probably get annoyed. But do we react in the same way when we see people throwing rubbish into the sea? We all know how rubbish ruins the environment on land, but we often forget the influence that it can have on environments like the sea, lakes, and rivers, too.

First of all, water pollution looks terrible. Many beautiful beaches can become covered in rubbish when whatever we have thrown into the water comes ashore. Even rivers and lakes have some plastic bags and bottles floating in them.

Secondly, rubbish can hurt animals and birds that live in or by the water. If they see a plastic bottle, they may think it is food. However, when they try and eat the bottle, it can get caught in their mouth or stomach and stop them from eating anything else. Plastic bottles can also stop dolphins from breathing. Sometimes, fishing boats leave bits of fishing net behind in the water. Fish can get caught in these and die.

Finally, people forget that plastics contain chemicals that stay in the water. This is very bad for both fish and plants. If you eat fish containing these chemicals, then you can also get ill.

In conclusion, we need to worry about water pollution as much as we care about land or air. We should all protect the seas, lakes, and rivers, and remember to take our rubbish away with us.

(Adapted from Empower)

Câu 5. [P20 STUDY] (Đúng/Không đúng)
Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage?

(A) When eaten by sea animals and birds, rubbish can threaten their lives.

(B) When washed ashore, rubbish can spoil the beauty of many beaches.

(C) People eating fish that contain chemicals from rubbish have no risk of getting sick.

(D) Chemicals contained in rubbish will stay in the water and harm fish and plants.

Câu 6. [P20 STUDY] (Đúng/Không đúng)
Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

(A) We all recognize the impact rubbish has on the sea, just like on land environments.

(B) Animals and birds can easily recognize rubbish and do not mistake it for food.

(C) Fishing boats leave bits of fishing net in the water, which can trap fish and cause death.

(D) We should worry about air pollution the most because it has a greater impact.

Has smartphones destroyed a generation? Jean Twenge – a psychology professor at San Diego State University – asked in her controversial book, iGen. In the book, she argues that those born after 1995 are facing "a mental-health crisis", and she believes it can be linked to growing up with their noses pressed against a screen. Her newest study provides more support for that connection, showing that teens who spent more than an hour or two a day interacting with their gadgets were less happy on average than those who had more face time with others.

Twenge's conclusions have come up against criticism in the past. Some have accused her work of oversimplifying or overlooking data that may tell a slightly different story. Twenge recognises that her study suggests only a link between screen use and psychological well-being. A possible explanation is that kids are running to their screens to escape from the things in life that are making them unhappy. However, the surveys can't say whether screen time directly changes teens' mental health, the research states. Philanthropist Melinda Gates, whose three children were also born after 1995, wrote in The Washington Post, "phones and apps aren't good or bad by themselves, but for adolescents who don't yet have the emotional tools to overcome life's problems, they can aggravate the difficulties of growing up." At the same time, she said, kids are learning on their devices and connecting in novel ways. Other studies have explored the connection between social media and isolation and how "likes" activate the brain's reward center. Some analyses have found that moderate use of these technologies is not harmful in itself and can even improve children's social skills and emotional strength.

There is no doubt that people are spending more time on these devices and that technology is having a major impact on kids and adults alike. "These are really important devices that have changed our lives in so many ways, not just for the worse but for the better", said Amanda Lenhart, deputy director of the Better Life Lab at New America. But the latest research "is looking straight at technology and wanting it to be the scapegoat".

(D) Twenge's newest study shows that teens who spent more time with gadgets were happier on average.

In the past, to become famous you needed a talent: singing, playing an instrument, dancing or writing books. Nowadays, it is much easier to become famous. This is because of the internet. All you need is a camera or webcam, computer, internet connection and a bit of creativity.

First of all, you need to decide what you are going to write or speak about: hair and makeup, comedy, sport, news and current affairs, raising money for a charity or something specialist like keeping tropical fish. Then choose a site to post on. Some sites are international and some may be particular to one country, such as Weibo in China. YouTube is a good site to choose if you make your own videos. It is easy to upload your short films, and many people use it.

If you want to become famous on YouTube, you should make lots of videos and release one every day. YouTubers who become popular are often those who present tips, advice, 'how to' guides and opinions on entertainment or stories in the news. If you allow advertisements in your videos, you will make money when people view the adverts. Facebook is a good platform for those who want to make money, but not for those who want to be famous. To earn money through Facebook, you need a very original and/or funny page, with interesting photos which can get you a few hundred thousand 'likes'.

If you achieve fame on Facebook, it probably won't last.
Twitter is a social media site where people can communicate through short messages. It works well for those who want to be well-known but are not so interested in making money. If you want to become known on Twitter, you will need to post lots of entertaining content. Instagram is a site where people mainly put up photos and videos. It is a site which can make you well-known, particularly if you want to become a famous photographer.

One of the noticeable changes since the beginning of 2025 is that many people's traffic awareness has changed significantly, especially at intersections, where red light running and jostling were common in the past. According to many assessments, increasing the penalty level is not only a tough measure but also a strong reminder of the responsibility of each traffic participant. Previously, with a light penalty, many people may have considered it a symbolic form of punishment, not enough of a deterrent. However, with the increased penalty level and the strictness in applying sanctions, it is clear to see a change in the behavior of many traffic participants.

Vietnam triumphed over Thailand with a thrilling 3–2 victory in the second leg of the final, securing the championship with a 5–3 aggregate score. Integral to Vietnam's success was newcomer Nguyen Xuan Son, whose exceptional performance earned him the Golden Boot for scoring seven goals, three more than his closest competitors. Unfortunately, his triumph was marred by a severe injury sustained in the first half of the second leg, which forced him to leave the field. Despite missing the first three matches due to not meeting the five-year residency requirement in Vietnam, Xuan Son proved to be a game-changer in the latter stages of the tournament.

Lunar New Year, known as "Tết" in Vietnam, is the most significant holiday for Vietnamese people. It is a time for family reunions, honoring ancestors, and celebrating the arrival of spring. For many, it represents cultural and spiritual values and an opportunity to take a well-deserved break from work. This raises the question: In 2025, when will the Lunar New Year fall, and how many days off will workers in Vietnam be granted?

As the effects of climate change persist, maintaining a sustainable environment has become crucial for our society's future. To address this, the global focus is shifting toward renewable energy sources, particularly solar and wind power.

Solar power is all about harnessing the energy of the sun by using solar panels to convert sunlight into usable electricity. This highly efficient form of energy produces zero emissions, so it can significantly reduce our carbon footprint. Moreover, solar panels are perfect for installation on a small scale, such as in private homes, since they require very little maintenance and have a long lifespan. However, the ability to generate solar power depends on the time of day and weather conditions. This means that solar panels are often less useful if they are installed in places where sunny weather is not typical.

Wind power, on the other hand, involves converting the energy of the wind into electricity using large turbines. Wind power doesn't produce any greenhouse gases, but it is not ideal for private use since turbines require consistent care. However, wind farms can be installed on a large scale and are able to produce electricity continuously regardless of the time of day. This means that if there were more investments in wind power, it could be a viable way to provide energy for major cities and even for whole regions.

Wind and solar power contribute significantly to a green environment by reducing our reliance on fossil fuels, helping us cut down on pollution and slow climate change. Additionally, using renewable energy sources helps promote spending on sustainable development by creating new career opportunities in the green energy sector.

For now, the biggest challenge of adopting green energy is the costs associated with installation and infrastructure, but the benefits unquestionably outweigh the downsides. If we want to stop the climate crisis and create a better and more sustainable future, green energy sources will undoubtedly be the key.

Câu 1. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises paragraph 2?

(A) Solar panels are easy to install in homes due to their long lifespan and efficiency, making them a popular choice for reducing carbon footprints.

(B) Solar power is a highly efficient and low-maintenance energy source with zero emissions, but its effectiveness is influenced by sunlight availability.

(C) Solar power is suitable for large-scale use, as it generates electricity efficiently without requiring sunny weather.

(D) Solar power is an affordable energy source that generates electricity consistently, even during cloudy weather or nighttime.

Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?

(A) Wind power uses large turbines to generate electricity without greenhouse gases and is highly effective for small-scale residential use.

(B) Wind power relies on large turbines to generate electricity without greenhouse gases, making it an affordable and efficient option for small-scale private use in homes.

(C) By utilizing wind energy, cities and regions can achieve energy independence through the continuous power generation of turbines.

(D) Wind power uses large turbines to generate continuous electricity without greenhouse gases, suitable for large-scale use to power cities and regions.

(A) Wind and solar power not only contribute to a green environment but also promote sustainable development.

(B) Wind and solar power focuses solely on solving environmental challenges through sustainable development.

(C) Wind and solar energy are affordable and create opportunities for sustainable development.

(D) Using renewable energy reduces our dependence on fossil fuels and addresses climate change.

Câu 4. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)

Which of the following best summarises the passage?

(A) Solar and wind power are efficient, cost-effective green energy solutions, ideal for private and large-scale use, with solar panels requiring minimal maintenance and wind turbines generating continuous electricity, making them superior to fossil fuels.

(B) Solar power, better suited for individual homes, and wind power, ideal for large cities with consistent energy production, both require high maintenance but play a crucial role in reducing greenhouse gas emissions and combating climate change.

(C) Investing in solar and wind power creates numerous job opportunities, stimulates economic growth in the green energy sector, and, despite high installation costs, offers undeniable long-term economic advantages.

(D) Solar and wind power, key green energy sources, reduce fossil fuel reliance and pollution, with solar suited for small-scale use and wind for large-scale applications, offering environmental and economic benefits despite initial costs.

For many people, New Year's celebrations are a joyful time to be shared with family and friends. However, for others, it can be a lonely and isolating experience. While the occasion is often associated with happiness and togetherness, certain factors can make individuals feel more alone than usual. Understanding the reasons behind this and finding solutions can help reduce feelings of loneliness during this time of year.

One significant reason why people feel lonelier at New Year's is the overwhelming pressure created by media and societal expectations. The event receives a great deal of attention, and individuals are encouraged to engage in something exciting or meaningful. Those without plans or surrounded by crowds may feel left out. Another contributing factor is that many businesses close during the holiday, leaving some without the opportunity to keep busy at work or interact with colleagues. Additionally, New Year is often a time of reflection, where people evaluate the past year and their lives in general. Without company, this introspection can intensify feelings of loneliness.

The impact of these factors can lead to emotional distress. People who feel isolated during New Year may experience sadness, anxiety, or a sense of inadequacy when comparing their lives to others. The constant portrayal of happiness and celebration on social media and in advertisements can exacerbate these feelings, making it difficult for individuals to enjoy the holiday or even treat it as an ordinary day.

To address this issue, several practical solutions can be implemented. Firstly, individuals should avoid placing too much importance on media-driven expectations and instead treat New Year as just another day. For those without specific plans, reflecting on the past year on a different, less pressured day may be more effective. Secondly, media outlets should promote inclusivity by normalizing quiet or low-key celebrations. By shifting the focus away from grand events, society can create a more inclusive and less isolating holiday experience.

Câu 5. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises paragraph 2?

(A) Media hype and societal pressure heavily contribute to feelings of isolation during New Year's celebrations.

(B) Business closures during the holiday season lead to increased loneliness and a lack of social interaction.

(C) New Year's introspection, especially without companionship, significantly intensifies feelings of inadequacy and isolation.

(D) The combination of media pressure, societal expectations, closures, and introspection amplifies loneliness.

Câu 6. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?

(A) Emotional distress, including sadness and anxiety, arises from isolation and social comparisons during New Year's.

(B) Social media and advertising portrayals of happiness worsen feelings of confidence and make it hard to enjoy the holiday.

(C) The impact of isolation leads to emotional distress, exacerbated by media portrayals, making it difficult to enjoy New Year's.

(D) Feelings of inadequacy and the inability to treat New Year's as an ordinary day contribute to significant emotional distress.

Câu 7. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises paragraph 4?

(A) Ignoring media hype and reflecting on the past year at a less pressured time are recommended solutions for individuals.

(B) Media outlets should normalize low-key celebrations and shift focus away from grand events to promote inclusivity.

(C) Individuals should treat New Year's as just another day, while the media should promote inclusivity by normalizing quieter celebrations.

(D) To combat loneliness, individuals should avoid media-driven expectations and find alternative ways to reflect on the past year.

Câu 8. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises the passage?

(A) Loneliness during New Year's stems from societal expectations, media portrayals, and closures, but addressing these factors through individual reflection and media inclusivity can create a more positive experience.

(B) New Year's celebrations are joyful for some but isolating for others; media and societal pressures, along with closures and self-reflection, amplify loneliness and emotional distress, which can be addressed through inclusivity and a shift in perspectives.

(C) The pressure to celebrate New Year's leads to feelings of loneliness for some, but treating the holiday differently and promoting low-key celebrations can help people feel more included and less isolated.

(D) Media-driven expectations and societal pressures during New Year's amplify feelings of loneliness and emotional distress, but practical solutions such as inclusivity and individual mindset shifts can help eliminate isolation during this time.

As you scroll through your social media feed or browse a news website, what is it that prompts you to read on? The chances are that it's the images that attract your attention. Online content that is accompanied by an image is more likely to prompt engagement, in the form of clicks, likes and shares, than straightforward text. This phenomenon is especially important to digital marketers.

They will tell you that on average people only read around 20 percent of the text on a web page. When it comes to remembering information, it is said that we retain around 80 percent of what we see versus only 20 percent of what we read and just 10 percent of what we hear. Although these figures are criticised by experts as an oversimplification, visuals do play an important role in how we deal with content in an information-rich world. Producing eye-catching visuals to attach to digital content is vital for anyone who wants to get their message across to the maximum number of people.

It's not only in the commercial world that the power of the image is being recognised. Governments and NGOs such as the World Health Organisation are acknowledging the importance of social media in communicating public health messages. Research into social media engagement during one recent disease outbreak, for example, found that it was image-based platforms such as Instagram that were most effective in communicating vital health messages. Whilst there is some concern amongst healthcare professionals that what starts off as helpful messages can easily get distorted as they are shared and reshared, specialists say that social media has huge potential for promoting public health.

Political journalists and campaigners have also long understood the power of an image. In a social media age, though, just posting a striking image that is sure to go viral has been labelled by some as 'slacktivism'. That is the idea that people will like and share an image without really thinking about the ideas behind it or engaging with the political message. The challenge for activists, journalists, marketers and governments is to develop a social media strategy that includes eye-catching visuals but is also more than skin deep.

(A) Images are powerful tools for public health communication on social media despite the risk of distortion.

B Governments and NGOs avoid using social media for public health messages due to concern about distortion.

C Healthcare professionals fear that messages may become distorted through repeated sharing on social media.

D Social media plays a crucial role in public health communication despite some of its reliability concerns.

Câu 11. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?

A Posting viral images ensures successful campaigns by helping activists and journalists achieve widespread engagement and political impact.

B Activists and journalists must balance eye-catching visuals with meaningful messages to combat shallow social media engagement.

C The power of images guarantees deep engagement and meaningful understanding of political messages among social media audiences.

D Eye-catching visuals alone are enough for activists and journalists to communicate their message effectively on social media.

Câu 12. [P20 STUDY] (Tóm tắt ý chính)
Which of the following best summarises the passage?

A Governments, marketers, and healthcare organizations widely use images in online communication, capitalizing on social media's reach to disseminate messages effectively, particularly in public health campaigns.

B While images are crucial for digital marketing and public health messaging, especially on platforms like Instagram, concerns remain about the potential for message distortion and superficial engagement online.

C Images are powerful tools for online engagement and information retention across various sectors, but their effectiveness hinges on creating strategies that encourage deeper engagement beyond superficial interaction.

D Despite concern about superficial engagement and message distortion, visuals on social media remain a crucial tool for capturing attention and communicating effectively in the fast-paced and information-rich digital age.

"Have smartphones destroyed a generation?" Jean Twenge – a psychology professor at San Diego State University – asked in her controversial book, iGen. In the book, she argues that those born after 1995 are facing "a mental-health crisis", and she believes it can be linked to growing up with their noses pressed against a screen. Her recent study provides more support for that connection, showing that teens who spent more than an hour or two a day interacting with their gadgets were less happy on average than those who had more face time with others.

Twenge's conclusions have come up against criticism in the past. Some have accused her work of oversimplifying or overlooking data that may tell a slightly different story. Twenge recognizes that her study suggests only a link between screen use and psychological well-being. A possible explanation is that kids are running to their screens to escape from the things in life that are making them unhappy. However, the surveys can't say whether screen time directly changes teens' mental health, the research states. Philanthropist Melinda Gates, whose children were also born after 1995, wrote in The Washington Post, "Phones and apps aren't good or bad by themselves, but for adolescents who don't yet have the emotional tools to overcome life's problems, they can aggravate the difficulties of growing up." At the same time, she said, kids are learning on their devices and connecting in novel ways. Other studies have explored the connection between social media and isolation and how "likes" activate the brain's reward centre. Some analyses have found that moderate use of these technologies is not harmful in itself and can even improve children's social skills and build emotional strength.

There is no doubt that people are spending more time on these devices and that technology is having a major impact on kids and adults alike. "These are really important devices that have changed our lives in so many ways, not just for the worse but for the better," said Amanda Lenhart, deputy director of the Better Life Lab at New America. But the latest research is looking straight at technology and wanting it to be the scapegoat.

Câu 1. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

(A) Evidence of technology being responsible for the quality of teenagers' mental health remains inconclusive.

(B) There is only one possible explanation for the link between smartphone use and teens' declining mental health.

(C) Teenagers who aren't yet ready for life challenges shouldn't use smart apps for more than two hours daily.

(D) Immediate action must be taken to encourage the use of smart technology for educational purposes.

A recent survey into how teenagers in a Southeast Asian country spend their free time has come up with what some people regard as a surprising finding: many of those surveyed reported that they would rather stay at home and do things indoors than go out and experience real-life adventures. One in four teenagers surveyed believed that online experiences were as fulfilling as real life, and more than half were actually afraid of trying new experiences. When asked about their most memorable experience over the previous ten months, nearly 30% of boys said 'playing a new video game', while 10% of all teenagers said it was watching a new TV series. On asking for more detailed information, researchers found that 20% of boys and 22% of girls said they had never had real-life adventures.

It would be easy to blame technological advances for these findings. After all, today's teenagers have many more indoor activities to choose from than their parents. About half a century ago children were expected to spend more of their free time outside. However, researchers do not pu the blame wholly on technology.

To members of older generations, these findings are worrying, because it means that young people increasingly rely on virtual reality and are consequently missing out on real outdoor activities such as mountain climbing, kayaking, etc., which have always been regarded as both enjoyable and character-building. The surveyed adults said they thought today's youth were more protected than they had been when they were growing up. Giving examples of this protection, more than half said they would not let their teenagers get into a taxi on their own. It is not clear whether adults believe the world is more dangerous than it used to be or whether they do not trust today's youngsters to look after themselves.

Câu 2. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

(A) Many adults think that the present world is as dangerous as it used to be.

(B) Virtual life is considered to be more and more challenging for teenagers in the present world.

(C) Many adults are doubtful about their children's ability to take care of themselves.

(D) The majority of teenagers surveyed believed virtual reality was as interesting as real life.

Sea turtles, majestic creatures that have roamed the oceans for over 100 million years, are now facing an unprecedented extinction crisis. While natural predators have always been part of their ecosystem, the primary threat to their survival today stems from human activities. It is both tragic and unacceptable that our actions have brought these ancient species to the brink of extinction.

One of the most significant contributors to this crisis is the rampant destruction of their nesting habitats. Coastal development for tourism, urban expansion, and industrial projects has left sea turtles with fewer safe places to lay their eggs. Despite clear evidence of the damage caused by such developments, authorities and corporations continue to prioritize profits over conservation efforts. This blatant disregard for biodiversity highlights a deeply rooted failure in global environmental policies.

Equally concerning is the impact of pollution, particularly plastic waste, on sea turtles. Studies have shown that hundreds of thousands of turtles die annually due to ingesting or becoming entangled in plastic. The situation is exacerbated by the alarming lack of accountability from industries responsible for producing and distributing plastic. Governments and corporations claim to support environmental sustainability, yet their actions remain largely superficial, focusing on public relations rather than meaningful change.

Adding to the crisis is the unsustainable exploitation of sea turtles for food, traditional medicine, and illegal trade. Despite international regulations such as CITES, enforcement remains weak and inconsistent, particularly in regions where sea turtles are most vulnerable. The failure of governments to crack down on poaching and trafficking underscores a broader issue of indifference towards endangered species.

It is not enough to raise awareness or rely on small-scale conservation efforts. What we need is global accountability, strict enforcement of laws, and a commitment to sustainable development. Without immediate and decisive action, sea turtles—symbols of resilience and longevity—will become yet another casualty of human negligence.

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is revolutionizing healthcare, offering advancements in diagnostics, treatment planning, and patient care. However, deploying AI systems successfully in medical settings requires substantial human oversight and expertise, making it a costly endeavor. This human involvement is essential to ensure that AI functions effectively and safely within the complex healthcare environment.

The implementation of AI in healthcare relies on a multidisciplinary team, including data scientists, engineers, and medical professionals. These experts collaborate to train AI algorithms on accurate and diverse datasets, validate their performance, and continuously update them with new medical knowledge. Without this oversight, AI systems risk errors or biases that could compromise patient safety. The cost of maintaining these skilled professionals adds to the already high expenses associated with integrating AI into healthcare.

Another challenge is the integration of AI into outdated healthcare infrastructures. Many healthcare systems still rely on legacy IT platforms that are incompatible with advanced AI applications. Upgrading these systems requires significant financial resources and technical expertise. For example, the UK's National Health Service (NHS) has struggled to adopt AI technology due to its antiquated IT systems, demonstrating how infrastructural barriers can slow progress and increase costs.

Despite these challenges, the potential benefits of AI in healthcare are undeniable. AI can improve diagnostic accuracy, personalize treatment, and automate administrative tasks, leading to better patient outcomes and more efficient care delivery. However, realizing these benefits requires not just advanced technology but also sustained investment in skilled personnel and modernized infrastructures. Without these investments, the promise of AI in healthcare may remain unfulfilled.

Câu 4. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

The author implies that _____.

(A) AI technology can function independently without human oversight if designed properly.

(B) Outdated healthcare infrastructures are a significant barrier to the successful implementation of AI.

(C) The financial cost of implementing AI is relatively minimal compared to its vast potential benefits.

(D) The integration of AI in healthcare will eliminate the need for human medical professionals.

Imagine a classroom where textbooks gather dust and lectures are replaced by laughter and joyful shouts. Instead of rows of desks, children huddle around tables, their eyes bright with excitement as they build robots, explore virtual worlds, and collaborate on creative projects. This isn't a scene from science fiction, but a glimpse into the future of education with the rise of game-based learning (GBL).

Gone are the days of rote memorization and standardized tests. GBL takes advantage of our natural inclination to learn through play, transforming education into an engaging and immersive experience. Through carefully designed games, students tackle complex concepts, develop critical thinking skills, and foster collaboration in a way that traditional methods often struggle to achieve. Overall, game-based learning redefines education, offering engaging benefits that spark motivation and personalized growth. It taps into our desire for challenges, making learning fun and empowering. By adapting to individual styles, it ensures everyone is challenged and supported, fostering deeper understanding through practical application. Moreover, it cultivates collaboration, honing social skills crucial for success in any field. GBL isn't just education; it's an exciting journey where learning becomes an adventure.

Delving into the realm of game-based learning (GBL) unveils a captivating array of platforms reshaping educational paradigms. Witness the transformative impact through a few notable examples: Minecraft Education Edition stands tall as a beloved sandbox game inviting students to immerse themselves in virtual worlds, encouraging collaborative problem-solving and fostering creativity through construction. Enter the realm of Kerbal Space Program, where players embark on a thrilling educational odyssey. Here, the principles of physics and engineering come alive as rockets are designed and launched into the depths of space, imparting invaluable knowledge in an engaging format. For the younger generation, DragonBox Go!: Numbers introduces the colorful realm of math through playful and interactive experiences. This platform makes learning basic math concepts an enjoyable journey for children, setting a strong foundation with its engaging interface.

Of course, GBL is not a magic bullet, and traditional methods still have their place in the classroom. However, integrating game-based elements can revolutionize education, making it more engaging, effective, and relevant to the needs of 21st-century learners.

Are you frustrated by your rebellious teenage son? Are you dealing with a misbehaving teenage daughter? You are not alone. Millions of parents are in the same boat. The chaos your child is causing can be resolved as long as you stick to the following principles.

First, get to know the causes of your child's rebellion. It may be as simple as a natural part of adolescent development as your child is learning necessary behavioural and social skills. Knowing this means you will be more understanding toward your teenage rebel and you will be able to actively help your child. Sometimes, with this knowledge in mind, you will even calmly ignore certain minor misbehaviours and these tolerances help improve the relationship with your child.

Second, work with your child to establish certain rules and consequences. It is essential that these boundaries be the joint product of parents and the child. More importantly, they must be enforced strictly and consistently.

Third, maintain open communication among family members. Instead of dictating orders or advice, you need to take on the role of a sympathetic listener. After all, your child needs to get their worries and pressure off their chest. Being a good listener also gives you more insight into your child and his/her problems.

Last but not least, seek professional help. A one-hour consultation will equip you with updated information and methods to be confident on the journey of helping your child.

Sporting memorabilia has always been the craze among fans of all kinds of sports. Collecting sporting memorabilia is a fun and exciting way to show your love and passion for sports. The most common reason for collecting memorabilia is its sentimental value. Memorabilia bring back collectors' special memories of their favourite teams, players or sports moments. Some other people take to great lengths to pursue the rare items. They say that the thrill of the search is as rewarding as owning one and that is an adventure of excitement. Some others collect sports memorabilia as a form of investment. Many items get increasingly valuable over time. These are the ones associated with legendary players or historic moments. Being lost at sea is one of the most terrifying experiences a person can face. Imagine being surrounded by nothing but water, with no land in sight, no help on the way, and no idea how long you will survive. You have to deal with hunger, thirst, exposure, fatigue, and the constant threat of sharks, storms, or pirates. You have to cope with the loneliness, the despair, and the fear of never seeing your loved ones again. You have to hope for a miracle, but also prepare for the worst.

Some people who have been lost at sea have managed to survive by using their skills, their resources, and their willpower. They have built rafts, caught fish, collected rainwater, and signalled for rescue. They have prayed, meditated, and kept their spirits up. They have found strength in themselves and in their companions. They have lived to tell their stories.

But others have not been so lucky. They have succumbed to dehydration, hypothermia, infection, or injury. They have gone mad, given up, or drowned. They have vanished without a trace, leaving behind only questions and grief. They have become statistics, or legends.

Being lost at sea is a test of human endurance and resilience. It is a challenge that few can overcome, and many cannot imagine. It is a nightmare that no one wants to face.

(D) The fear of being lost at sea is greater than the reality of the experience.

The heritage of the United Kingdom, known as British heritage, is a wealth of varied and extensive inheritance that mirrors the past, customs, and principles of the nation. It encompasses both tangible and intangible elements that contribute to the country's identity, including landmarks, natural scenery, customs, languages, literary works, musical compositions, and artistic expressions. British heritage holds immense significance, serving as a wellspring of pride and motivation for the British population. Furthermore, it represents a valuable resource that benefits sectors such as tourism, education, and international relations.

The architectural heritage stands out as a prominent manifestation of the British legacy, characterised by notable structures like the Houses of Parliament, Buckingham Palace, Westminster Abbey, and Stonehenge. These buildings symbolise distinct eras and architectural styles that span the breadth of British history, ranging from ancient times to the present day. They serve as remarkable examples of the nation's artistic and engineering accomplishments. Moreover, the architectural heritage mirrors the diverse and multicultural nature of British society, as it incorporates influences from various regions and cultures, including Celtic, Roman, Anglo-Saxon, Norman, Gothic, Renaissance, Baroque, Georgian, Victorian, and contemporary styles.

The cultural heritage constitutes another significant facet of the British legacy. It is shaped by historical events and interactions that have played a pivotal role in shaping the British identity, including the Norman Conquest, the Reformation, the Industrial Revolution, the World Wars, and the Commonwealth. Within the cultural heritage, there is a celebration of the British people's ingenuity and inventiveness, exemplified through renowned literary works like Shakespeare's plays and poems, Jane Austen's novels, and J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter series. Additionally, it embraces a diverse range of music genres, from classical to rock and pop, and encompasses various visual arts such as painting, sculpture, and photography. This rich cultural heritage showcases the creativity and artistic achievements of the British people throughout history.

As the nation continues to evolve, the British heritage, a treasure trove, remains an enduring source of connection, inspiration, and collective pride.

(D) The British heritage is a source of pride for the British population.

Nomophobia, short for "no-mobile-phone phobia", is a modern phenomenon that affects many people in today's digital age. It is the irrational fear of being without one's mobile phone or being unable to use it. This condition can cause anxiety and distress, and it highlights the profound impact mobile devices have on our lives. The fear of losing or being separated from one's phone is a growing concern. Some common situations that trigger nomophobia include misplacing one's phone, running out of battery, or losing network signal. The fear intensifies when people imagine not having their phones to contact friends and family, access the internet, or use GPS for navigation.

Nomophobia is not limited to any age group and can affect individuals of all backgrounds. It often becomes evident when people experience panic or anxiety when they forget their phones at home or are unable to use them temporarily. Symptoms may include restlessness, rapid heartbeat, sweating, and a sense of insecurity. The roots of nomophobia lie in the convenience and connectedness that mobile phones provide. These devices have become integral to our daily lives, serving as not just communication tools but also cameras, entertainment hubs, personal organizers, and more. This dependence on mobile phones can lead to a feeling of vulnerability when separated from them.

(C) monophobia can be considered the most common disorder nowadays

(D) the less often we use our mobile phones, the better it is

Space conquest is incredibly important for many reasons. It's like exploring a big, mysterious book, and we're just starting to read the first pages. This adventure helps us learn more about our universe and Earth.

First, we discover how our planet works. Space missions study our environment, weather, and climate. This information helps us predict and understand things like storms and changes in temperature. We can also learn about pollution and how to protect our Earth.

Second, space exploration can make our lives better. For example, we use satellites to have better GPS, which helps us find our way around. We also get new medicines and technologies from space research. These inventions make our lives healthier and more comfortable.

Third, space exploration helps us dream and be creative. It inspires kids to become scientists, engineers, and astronauts. This means we'll have smart people to solve problems on Earth and in space.

Finally, space conquest helps us find new planets and maybe even new places to live. Our Earth is the only home we have, but it's important to have a backup plan just in case.

In conclusion, space conquest is not just about going to other planets. It's about learning, improving our lives, and making our world a better place. We should keep exploring the universe and see what amazing things we can discover. So, let's keep reading the book of space, one page at a time, and make our world and future even brighter.

Câu 11. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

(A) Mankind is finishing space conquest missions

(B) Disadvantages outweigh advantages as far as space conquest is concerned

(C) the survival of mankind on Earth depends on space conquest

(D) Space conquest is in its first stage

Once, a typical vacation was a week at the beach or a lake – near home or somewhere with more reliable weather. But recently, vacationers have been looking for a different vacation experience. Perhaps inspired by wildlife documentaries on television, tourists have been flocking to places like Kenya and South Africa for safaris and bush camps. Interest in China has been growing too. Large numbers of tourists have visited China on cultural tours since the 2008 Olympic Games. Meanwhile, travel companies have been promoting the traditional vacation package with a new twist to attract more customers: spa vacations in Spain and luxury historical tours in Egypt. One of the most notable changes is that the older generation of vacationers has been traveling like never before. The number of vacationers over 60 has been growing. Cruise destinations in the Caribbean or even Antarctica are no longer just for young adventurers.

Câu 12. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

(A) Cruises to Antarctica have long been popular among young travellers.

(B) Spa vacations in Spain have attracted a lot of Egyptian tourists every year.

(C) The number of young travellers is on the increase.

(D) Vacationers determine their destinations based on airfares.

WWF researchers are celebrating the first live sighting of a Sumatran rhino in Kalimantan, the Indonesia part of Borneo, since it was thought to be extinct there. This is also the first physical contact with the species in the area for over 40 years and is a major milestone for rhino conservation in Indonesia. The female Sumatran rhino, which is estimated to be between four and five years old, was safely captured in a pit trap in Kutai Barat in East Kalimantan on 12 March.

"This is an exciting discovery and a major conservation success," said Dr Efransjah, CEO of WWF-Indonesia. "We now have proof that a species once thought extinct in Kalimantan still roams the forests, and we will now strengthen our efforts to protect this extraordinary species."

In 2013, a WWF survey team first found evidence that the species was not extinct in Kalimantan by identifying footprints and capturing an image of a rhino on a camera trap in the same forest. Since then, 15 Sumatran rhinos have been identified in three populations in Kutai Barat.

The Sumatran rhino is one of two rhino species that exist in Indonesia. It is estimated that less than 100 Sumatran rhinos remain in the wild, mainly on the island of Sumatra. The rhinos face serious threats from poaching, and habitat loss due to mining, plantations and logging. The wild population of Sumatran rhinos in the Malaysian part of Borneo was declared extinct last year.

The captured female rhino is being held in a temporary enclosure before being translocated by helicopter to a new home – a protected forest about 150 km from the capture site. The rhino's new home is envisioned as the second Sumatran Rhino Sanctuary in Indonesia.

Câu 13. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

(A) Malaysia and Indonesia share Borneo Island.

(B) protected forests are always the best environment for rhinos.

(C) more than 100 Sumatran rhinos remain in the wild.

(D) the female Sumatran rhino adapts to the habitat better than the male.

Technology plays a key role in improving Vietnamese business productivity as well as the national socio-economic development. Ministry of Science and Technology has started a number of programmes to aid businesses in key sectors including agriculture, healthcare, industrial production and telecommunications in adopting modern technology and developing artificial intelligence (AI).

The COVID-19 pandemic, which triggered severe social and economic disruption in 2021, has forced domestic businesses to double their digitalisation efforts and to utilise the advanced technology to adapt to the new normal and extended periods of lockdown and mobility restrictions. 2021 saw the rapid development of the country's digital infrastructure and applications as a response to social distancing requirements.

Vietnam ranked 44/132 in the Global Innovation Index in 2021 with more than 18,500 scientific and technological discoveries, a 2.5 per cent increase compared to the previous year.

Vietnam has set a target to speed up the development of science and technology for the 2021-30 period with the establishment of modern research and development centres in both public and private sectors as a core mission objective.

Câu 14. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)

Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

(A) The Vietnamese government has been slow to adopt modern technology in key sectors.

(B) The COVID-19 pandemic has had a positive impact on Vietnam's digital infrastructure.

(C) Vietnam's ranking in the Global Innovation Index declined significantly in 2021.

(D) The country is focused on reducing its research and development activities during the 2021-30 period.

In this day and age, it's inevitable that your kid will need a cell phone at some point. Buying a phone for your kid is a big decision. Not only is it a financial investment, but you also need to consider Internet safety and how kids can use electronics in a healthy way. "Today's parents are both blessed and cursed by technology options made available to their children," says Titania Jordan, the chief parenting officer of parental-control app Bark. "While the ability to locate and communicate with your children in real-time is incredible, the ability of others to do so can be frightening and dangerous."

When considering which cell phone to buy for your child, consider their age, the intended users of the phone, and the parental control options. If your teen just started driving, a smartphone with a built-in GPS and full calling abilities in case of emergency may be a good bet. For a younger kid, a simple phone with no internet access that lets them text their parents may be all they need. You may even decide they don't need a phone quite yet but can instead use a smartwatch to text you and make short phone calls with approved contacts. To find the best cell phones for kids, we surveyed nearly 500 parents to learn about the phones they have bought for their own kids, as well as how their families navigate technology use. We also spoke to the Internet safety experts that specialize in kids' safe use of phones. Additionally, we reviewed guidance from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) regarding when to give your child a cell phone.

Câu 15. [P20 STUDY] (Suy luận)
Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

(A) What children need is smart wearable gadgets, not phones.

(B) The younger the kids are, the cheaper the phone they should have.

(C) Teenagers who are getting used to learning should own a phone with a good GPS feature.

(D) It is the price of the phone that parents should take into account when buying a phone.

The history of television

On January 26, 1926, a group of scientists, including members of Britain's Royal Institution, gathered in a laboratory in an upstairs room in London. They were about to witness the world's first television broadcast.

The television itself was little more than a collection of old junk taken from discarded machinery: a large cardboard disc with pieces of glass around it, behind which were several old electric motors and a mass of glass tubes and other parts from old radio receivers.

The engineer who had assembled this device was John Logie Baird, a slim, nervous man in his late thirties, who sat turning the knobs on a small control panel. Seated in the world's first TV studio – a chair in front of the cardboard disc – was a sixteen-year-old boy. You could say he was the world's first TV star.

As the boy turned his head from side to side, Baird focused and tuned his TV transmitter until the audience could see the image of the boy speaking and moving on a receiver in the same room. Then the audience moved to a separate room, and Baird repeated the demonstration with another receiver there, the first actual TV broadcast. To be truthful, the image on the receivers was faint and difficult to see, but Baird's "televisor" showed for the first time that it was possible to send and reproduce live images.

In June 1928, Baird transmitted the first outdoor television broadcast, and on August 22 of the same year, the General Electric Corporation in the United States produced the first televised news report. It showed the governor of New York accepting the Democratic Party's nomination for president.

A number of technical difficulties remained to be worked out, and it was not until 1936 that the first scheduled broadcasting service began. It was produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation in London. In that same year, the Radio Corporation of America, which later became RCA Corporation, installed experimental television receivers in 150 New York City homes and began its first transmissions. Their first program was a cartoon called Felix the Cat. Three years later, the National Broadcasting Corporation established regular TV broadcasts in the United States. The United States entered World War II in 1941, and broadcasting was suspended until after the war ended in 1945.

These first TVs looked very little like the ones we now have. The earliest TVs were large wooden cabinets with screens that measured only 7 to 10 inches (18 to 25 centimeters) diagonally. Today, 27-inch (69-centimeter) screens are very common, and conventional televisions are available with screens as large as 40 inches (100 centimeters). In the 1990s, rear-projection televisions became popular, with screens from 48 inches to 60 inches (122 centimeters to 155 centimeters) diagonally. There are also television sets with screens only 3 inches across – small enough to carry in your pocket.

Many of us today would find it difficult to imagine life without television, but the history of this medium is not a long one. Will its future development be equally rapid?

To succeed at work, you must get along well with all the people with whom you interact, including managers, co-workers, clients, vendors, customers, and anyone else you communicate with. These are the types of soft skills all employers value. Develop these skills and emphasize them in job applications, resumes, cover letters, and interviews. Showing the interviewer that you have the skills the company is seeking will help you get hired.

Communication: Communication skills are important in almost every job. You will definitely need to understand and get your ideas across to the people you work with, whether they are vendors, customers, partners, staff, or employers. Having communication skills, you will be able to speak clearly and politely with people in person, by phone, and in writing.

Critical thinking: No matter what the job is, employers want candidates who can analyze situations and make informed decisions. Whether you are working with data, teaching students, or fixing a home heating system, you need to be able to understand problems, think critically, and devise solutions. Skills related to critical thinking include creativity, flexibility, and curiosity.

Leadership: While not every job opening is a leadership role, most employers will want to know that you can make decisions when push comes to shove and can manage situations and people. The ability to step up to take responsibility in a difficult situation and help resolve problems is something employers look for in prospective employees.
Positive attitude: Employers are always seeking people who will bring a positive attitude to the office. They want employees who are friendly to others, eager to work, and generally pleasant to be around. Being able to keep things positive is especially important if you are working in a fast-paced, high-stress work environment.
Teamwork: Hiring managers look for job candidates who can work well with others. Whether you will be doing a lot of team projects or simply attending a few departmental meetings, need to be able to work effectively with the people around you. Some skills related to teamwork include the ability to negotiate with others and to recognize and appreciate variety in a team. Another related skill is the ability to accept and apply feedback from others.

As global concerns about climate change intensify, the shift toward renewable energy sources has become a pressing priority for many countries. According to the International Renewable Energy Agency (IRENA), the share of renewable energy in global electricity generation reached 29% in 2020, up from 26% in 2019. This increase reflects a growing commitment to cleaner energy, particularly due to investments in solar and wind energy technologies.

Dr. Maria Chen, a leading researcher at the Green Energy Institute, states, "The rapid advancements in technology have made renewable sources increasingly accessible and cost-effective. For instance, the cost of solar energy has decreased by 89% over the past decade, making it a more viable option for both households and businesses". However, she also highlights that challenges persist. "While progress is being made, transitioning to renewable energy at a national scale requires significant infrastructure changes, technological support, and widespread public engagement", she adds.

Countries around the world have set ambitious targets for renewable energy adoption. In Germany, for example, the government aims to produce 65% of its electricity from renewable sources by 2030, with a focus on both solar and wind technologies. Similarly, the United States has pledged to reach 100% carbon-free electricity by 2035. Despite these commitments, experts argue that the pace of change must accelerate to meet global climate goals.

Câu 11. [P20 STUDY] (Đọc hiểu)
What is mentioned about renewable energy in paragraph 1?

(A) Its share in electricity generation is decreasing year by year.

(B) The increase in its share is primarily due to government regulations.

(C) The global share of renewable energy in power generation saw a rise.

(D) It is more expensive compared to traditional energy sources.

Câu 12. [P20 STUDY] (Đọc hiểu)
What does "it" in paragraph 2 refer to?

(A) the cost

(B) solar energy

(C) the last decade

(D) technology

Câu 13. [P20 STUDY] (Đọc hiểu)
What is the main topic of paragraph 2?

(A) Dr. Chen's perspective on the accessibility of renewable energy

(B) The development of solar energy over the past decade

(C) Renewable energy advancements coupled with transition obstacles
